In China and Southeast Asia, people start their day with grab-and-go food on the way to work. These are known to be prepared street-style with recipes that have been passed down through generations. They are not fancy nor extraordinary, but rather simple, tasty, and affordable. Most importantly, the meal is prepared from the stubbornness of love by the operator and their belief in their craft. You may not find street-food special, but you will find that you can eat it everyday and still fall in love
